In a critical situation, your Galaxy phone can make all the difference. You can use it to make emergency calls or contact the person you like in a time of need. And if you have to act quickly, you can call right from the Close screen. On top of this, you can turn on Emergency Mode. This will help save battery life by changing some of the phone's functions, such as reducing the screen brightness and limiting apps. With Emergency Mode, your phone battery can last for a couple days. Note: The home screen will be changed in a dark term to reduce battery consumption. Screen availability and settings can vary by wireless service provider, software version, and phone model. Make an emergency call to the Lock screen When something urgent happens, you probably won't have time to unlock your phone and call 9-1-1. If you have a security measure in place, such as a PIN or a biometric safety, you can perform an emergency call right from the Lock screen. Just swipe up your phone screen to be taken to the Lock screen, and then tap Emergency Call. A dial pad will appear where you can enter your desired number. Your registered emergency contact will also appear at the top of the screen. Finally, a Medical info icon will appear at the bottom of the screen. Type this to display any medical information you have added to your personal contacts. To make an emergency call with no service or SIM card in a duration situation, you can still make emergency calls even if you don't have service or a working SIM card. As long as there is a nearby network signal, your phone will let you contact 9-1-1. The network doesn't even have to be your own insurance company – it just needs a signal that's strong enough to put the call in. When you need to make an emergency call, call 9-1-1 the way you normally would on your phone. Making a call while in Emergency Mode the Home screen in Emergency mode will only show the apps and functions you absolutely need. This includes the Phone app and the emergency call option. Typing the Phone app to access all your contacts, so you can always make a call to family members and friends. The Keypad is available if you need to make a new number. Type Emergency Call at the bottom of the Home screen called 9-1-1. Type Yes to activate the call. Note: You will be able to use the Phone app to make a call to a specified contact and also make emergency calls. You can also turn on the flashlight and sound the alarm and send your location information to others in a message. To turn on Emergency mode, hold down the power key until the power menu appears. Type in Emergency Mode. If necessary, enter your lock screen credentials. Type the checkbox to confirm you have read the Emergency mode and conditions, and then type Agree. Typing Turn On – Emergency Mode is activated. On phone without a dedicated power key, swipe down from the top of the screen to open Quick Settings. Tap the power icon, and then type Emergency mode. Cornea in Emergency mode is very different from the regular cornea you are used to. Here's what it looks like: Flashlight: Turn the flashlight on or off. Share my location: Share your location with a beneficiary of your choice. Web: Launch Samsung Internet. Emergency Alarm: Your phone will turn on a loud alarm. Phone: Launch the Phone app to make calls. Add App: Adds additional apps. You can only add Facebook, Calculator, Clock, Card, Email, or Samsung Note. Sometimes, even in Emergency mode, you don't need certain apps. You can remove the apps you don't want to use. While in Emergency mode, type More options (the three dots vertically), and then tap Remove apps. Tap the Remove icon next to the app you want to remove, and then tap Done. If necessary, you can add the app again later by hitting Add app. Note: Some apps can't be removed from the Home screen. Just because the Emergency mode is done, it doesn't mean losing your phone lost all of its features. Type More options (three dots are vertically), and then type Settings. Type a feature to change its settings. Note: Only apps and features that can be used in Emergency mode will be available. When you don't have to worry about battery life, it's time to turn Emergency Mode off. Rattled More options (three dots are vertically), and then tap Turn in Emergency Mode. If you ever experience a true emergency, such as a flood or earthquake, you may not have time to make a phone call or send a text. Because of this, you should set up the SOS Message feature on your phone. It will send an SOS alert to emergency contact, so they will know something is wrong. All you have to do is press the Side key or power key once the couple are sent out the alert. To set up message SAS, first navigate to and open Settings. Type advanced features, and then tap SAUCE message. Tap the switch at the top of the screen; read the information and then tap Continue. Review the required permission, and then tap Start. From here, select either Create Contacts or Select from Contacts. Make or select your emergency contact – they will be one of the SOS recipients. If you want, you can add multiple contacts. Tap back, Then adjust the different settings. For example, you can adjust how many times you need to press the Side key or Power key before an alert is sent. Or, you can decide whether you would like to attach images or an audio recording to the SAS message. If you are ever in an emergency and want to send an SOS message, press the Side key or power key three or four times quickly. This will send an SOS message to your designated contact(s). Note: The phone must have an active SIM card in order to send an ALERT SAS. When using the SOS feature, your location, photos, and voice recordings will be sent the first time a call is made. It will only send the update location (every 30 minutes for an span of 24 hours) if you have changed your location. This also applies to Galaxy Watch devices.
